TITAN HIDE

The Titan derivative that Kevin Nash is backing to relegate oval style umbrellas to carp history. Following the world beating success of the restyled Titan bivvy series, the Titan Hide takes the same principle of a quick erect rigid and lightweight frame, but tailored for maximum protection for overnighnters and even day sessions.

Packing down to 44" (112cm) and weighing just 4.6kg it's the short session shelter of the future. Curved front ribs protect against driving rain, with extended cut storm panels to allow kit to be kept dry even when used open fronted. So rigid and stable is the Titan Hide that unless in absolutely extreme weather or in head on winds, fitting storm poles is unnecessary – saving even more time when setting up and packing down.

For the rare occasions when additional support is required, the unique Fast Fit storm pole adaptors slide then lock over the front rib mouldings to support the canopy in seconds, without bivvy sticks needing to be screwed into position each time.

For changing seasons an optional zip in mozzi mesh infill panel or full waterproof panel add flexibility with an additional second skin available for session comfort or winter conditions.

- » Super fast erect short session Titan
- » Flat back for space efficiency with sleep systems
- » 5000mm Hydrostatic head 420D PU coated nylon
- » Supplied with Nash T pegs

TESTING THE TITAN HIDE

"When I first took a Titan Hide out to test I was blown away, or rather to my surprise not blown away. It was a week session in Austria in early April and I'd been over a week or so before with my Titan T1. The weather had been a barmy 18 to 20 degrees – summer's here I thought? My beloved baby first Titan Hide sample had arrived in the meantime and I couldn't wait to get it out.

What I didn't know is that Austria was about to experience the worst weather of the year, and on the third day I woke to a snow blizzard and increasing winds. By that evening 50 mile per hour winds were hitting the Hide side on, the pegs through woodchip were barely an inch into firm ground and even more concerning this was a first prototype with no storm stick attachments. The wind was alarmingly strong and I laid there as violent gusts battered the drum tight skin of the Hide, each one panicking me more as my reflexes made me want to grab it to prevent it blowing away. But it didn't, it just sat there, anchored and unmoving.

Like I said, I was blown away, I've been designing shelters for over 35 years and I've never sat under a brolly style shelter that comes close to the Hide's rigidity and stability. Winds lift shelters over it, pushing it into the ground, much like the aerodynamics of a Formula 1 car help keep it pinned to the track at high speeds. After my Austrian experience unless I was fishing in a full on frontal wind, I can't imagine when I would ever even need storm sticks. I've been a brolly user all my life but not any more. Putting the Hide against a brolly it is infinitely stronger, more rigid, more stable, quicker to set up and put down and only weighs 4.6 kilos.

Mixed emotions here – I invented the Oval Brolly, Profile Brolly and the Groundhog, all three accepted as icons of their time. Now I think I've killed them all with the Titan Hide."

BANK LIFE GAZEBO

The Bank Life Gazebo is the centre of the social, whether holiday carping, open days and fish-ins or gathering to compare catches and eat and drink on long sessions.

Typical Nash thought has gone into the Gazebo, despite a colossal floorplan and standing over seven feet tall (2.1 metres) it can be easily erected by a single person thanks to the remarkable continuous frame concept. No poles need to be fitted together, the tough aluminium frame remains connected at all times. Simply press the quick lock collars and slide to extend corner poles and they automatically lock into place, the central hub then producing the finished Gazebo shape.

The Gazebo features doors on all four sides, one double zip design with buckle and webbings to secure it, the others with single central openings and elasticated tie backs. Two of the four sides have Velcro storm panels with internal mesh for cooling air flow. A neat touch is setting up Double Tops and Titans facing into the Gazebo, allowing a communal, weatherproof living space between them.

- » 420D PU coated nylon
- » Double legged corner supports for increased stability
- » Single person assembly
- » Continuous frame concept, no pole connections required
- » One touch frame extension and locking
- » Internal mesh pockets in all corners for accessory storage

ROD SUPPORT

NASH GLOBETROTTER POD

The most flexible pod design yet, the Globetrotter offers endless options for any swim or situation, from staying low profile on a small syndicate to extending the front legs to suit extreme natural venues like big rivers and inland seas. Yet the Globetrotter packs down into a tiny 60cm carry bag! Loaded with neat Nash design touches the spring loaded ratchet leg lock assembly offers total flexibility for rod position and elevation. The twin extending main bar eliminates troublesome pod twist, completed with goal post style removable buzzer bars.

Detachable legs reduce transport dimensions for the carp angler who needs one solution without a Euro size package. Available in 3 Rod and 4 Rod options, Globetrotters are supplied with four short legs and two 36 inch (92cm) two piece extension legs for massive elevation where required but retaining the advantage of short packdown.

- » Spring loaded ratchet leg angle adjustment and lock, guaranteed zero slippage
- » Virtually infinite rod position options from horizontal to vertical
- » Supplied with fixed length buzzer bars for goal post style support
- » Extending parallel main bar assembly for non twist frame support
- » Four detachable adjustable legs, plus two 36 inch (92cm) two piece extension legs

Featuring the same short packdown advantage as the twin longer legs supplied with Globetrotters, a centre thread with compression collar reduces packdown size to less than 60cm.

SPOD STATION

The slick baiting accessory that raises your game whether you are match carping or summer hauling. A tough metal framework with four 3/8" BSF thread corner fittings for storm pole support, the Spod Station is designed for you to quickly drop in the 10 or 17 litre Nash rectangular buckets, and leave your bait at exactly the height you need to repeatedly Spomb without unnecessary bending over or moving between casts, rebait rigs, mould groundbait balls or mix more sloppy spod mix.

A rectangular metal side tray allows you to keep finger stalls, pop up pots and rig tools handy at all times, complete with a metal retaining loop to hang numbers of pre-tied and ready baited rigs for when the action is hectic. A hanging hook takes a hand towel or even air dry bags to keep boilies close to hand for throwing stick work.

At the opposite side a moulded framework perfectly accepts a drop in matchman's style bait box to hold ready tied cobweb bags or sticks, or hold water for maintaining the consistency of your spod mix, or simply washing your hands after a heavy baiting session.

Two 3/8" female threads on the side of the frame are a neat touch to allow Butt Locks (not included) to support rods securely against the Spod Station when you're not feeding the swim.

Available in two sizes, the Double Spod Station carries two buckets and two bait boxes for a variety of feeds or more aggressive baiting with larger quantities.

Note: Storm poles not included

AN ALL SEASON SYSTEM

Whilst Zero Tolerance has built its reputation on extreme protection in cold temperatures, the essence of ZT clothing today is all season application. A range of true high performance outdoor garments, from initial concept through to material choice, cut and trim all ZT clothing is designed in house by Nash... by anglers!

Individually ZT garments offer solutions to everything from chilly summer mornings to unexpected downpours, the freezing depths of winter and biting winds. Worn together they keep the most committed angler comfortable, dry and angling efficiently through all the extremes of the four seasons.

THE LAYERING PRINCIPLE

ZT Clothing adopts the accepted principle of layering from extreme and outdoor pursuits clothing systems to respond to changeable conditions and levels of exertion.

Base Layers are designed to wick away moisture, preventing it being trapped next to the skin as activity levels reduce. Synthetic fast drying materials help to achieve this, and combined with tailored fit close to the body help regulate temperature.

Mid Layers are the insulation layers, offering quick drying, breathable warmth, typically fleeces, hoodies or hollow fibre layers designed for outerwear in most conditions.

An outer shell gives the protection from the elements, using high performance windproof and waterproof materials and fittings to prevent moisture ingress even in driving rain, and allowing the Base and Mid Layers to build and retain heat for comfort.

Different configurations of these three elements allow anyone to be comfortable almost anywhere in the world, and more importantly stay comfortable even when conditions or activity levels change quickly.

NATURE IDENTICAL

Combining frontline outdoor performance with unmistakable style ZT clothing uses carefully selected pantones to ensure each garment is absorbed readily into the natural world.

Created exclusively by Nash, the Fractured Nature camouflage effect pattern has been developed using real leaf samples, with shades and tones identically replicated before patterning into an amazing composite that disrupts outlines, and blends into backdrops whatever the season or environment.
